Surrounded by beauty

David W. Jackson's fascination with art began at an early age and led him to the profession of an art educator as well as a professional artist. Although he is well known for his accurate depiction of wildlife and Western landscapes, his work is very diverse and reflects a wide variety of subjects.

"My home is in the Rocky Mountains so I am surrounded by wildlife and inspirational beauty in my own backyard," says Jackson. "As I have traveled to different areas, I have also found many new and interesting subjects for my paintings, from the beauty of the Sonoran desert to the villages of Tuscany."

Jackson received his Master of Fine Arts through Utah State University. Proficient in several mediums, his current work focuses on oil painting and sculpting. His techniques range from varied brushstrokes to modulating color with a palette knife, focusing on light, color, and composition.

"I feel fortunate to have been blessed with a talent that has enriched my life. Art has been both an obsession and a passion that has brought me a lot of satisfaction over the past 40 years," says Jackson. "Hopefully my art has also enriched the lives of others who have enjoyed my work."

In August Jackson will have two important shows in Colorado. August 5-7 his work will be featured at Breckenridge Fine Art Gallery in Breckenridge (970-453-9500, www.breckenridgefineart.com), and August 11-14 Jackson will have artwork available at Vail Fine Art Gallery in Vail.
